Games The last two major categories covered on your road map for basic computer software are Games and Animations/Visual Effects (AE). Both have different features and abilities. For the road map, you need to decide which of the two you'll use on your computer. For game enthusiasts, you can download a number of online game builders to play games directly from your web browser. Most of today's most popular games are downloadable game builders that you can run on your computer. Q: Passing GET request query parameters to the url in angular 2 I have a GET request method which should create a new item in my database. this.http.get("/api/employees?id=" + this.employee.id) I am getting a success http call response, however the payload is null and i need to pass the id query parameters. I tried it like this: this.http.get(`/api/employees?id=${this.employee.id}`); A: You need to quote the values in the request. Change your code to: this.http.get("/api/employees?id=" + `${this.employee.id}`); Fiddle: Q: How do I use the built-in AMI DMVS to track the hit points of animals? The build-in DMVS function in several simulation packages is usually the simplest and most accurate way to track animal damage. Is there a way to use the built-in DMVS and several functions to track hit points, etc. of animals in a physically correct way? (specifically, for the purpose of understanding whether player characters make target dice rolls for predators on a 1-or-2) A: The DMVS system is designed to apply as little lag to game frames as possible. For example, when you are making skill checks, there are a lot of maths calculations being done and the DMVS picks the correct ones to apply to the relevant frame. However, to do damage, it's a different thing. There's a bunch of maths, but the answer isn't necessarily available immediately. Usually the game needs a few frames to give that answer. For example, if you have a projectile flying through space, the hit point table needs to search through a table of objects and find the right one. Similarly, when you need to roll a d20 to hit a target, the table needs to search through all the objects in the table of dice to find the dice it needs to roll against. All of those activities take time, and the DMVS is designed to be very quick. To Neurobehavioral, immunological, and histopathological alterations after isoniazid and pralidoxime poisoning in rats. Neurobehavioral and biochemical changes as well as blood histopathology were studied in adult male albino rats following isoniazid and pralidoxime (PAM) poisoning. PAM at 3 or 6 mg/kg and isoniazid (INH) at 45 mg/kg were administered (po) daily for 10 days to examine the protective efficacy of this drug in comparison to standard drug. There were behavioral deficits in rotarod, conditioned avoidance, and beam walk tasks. INH-intoxicated rats showed reduced sucrose intake, which was prevented by PAM. Elevated serum lactate dehydrogenase and brain glutamate oxaloacetate transaminase and reduced brain lactate dehydrogenase activity were observed in INH-intoxicated rats, and these biochemical parameters were reverted by PAM. Histopathologically, INH poisoning caused notable neuronal loss in the cortex, hippocampal CA1 and CA2 regions, and dentate gyrus. Pralidoxime pretreatment against INH was found to be ineffective. Both drugs, INH and PAM, produced significant histopathological changes and thus could not be used for treatment of chronic INH poisoning in man.Vaginal epidermoid cyst: cytologic findings and the differential diagnosis. A diagnosis of vaginal epidermoid cyst can be made only after biopsy of the lesion. The cytologic criteria of epithelial squamous cells, numerous pale cells in a background of cellular debris and squamoid, microorganisms are shown in this case.Q: Finding f given $f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f(f
